Ultra Quick Wrestling

Welcome to Ultra Quick Pro Wrestling!

With Ultra Quick Pro Wrestling, you'll have an entire world of Professional Wrestling at your fingertips. The game not only resolves winners and losers of matches, but all of theatrical and bizarre story lines of Pro Wrestling will unfold before your very eyes.

Ultra Quick Pro Wrestling Comes with 84 wrestler cards from the 1991 Season. I'm sure that many might wonder why 1991? What was so special about that year?

While on the surface, perhaps 1991 is not remembered for any historical events in the annals of Pro Wrestling. However, upon closer examination, 1991 is a perfect year for a wrestling game. Firstly, wrestling was still considered kayfabe in 1991. (Meaning that rather than the "sports entertainment" of today, the wrestlers and promoters still tried to convince everyone that pro wrestling was not a staged event.)

There were also still many territories in 1991 that have long since disappeared in today's market. These territories produced many local stars, and intriguing storylines on a regional basis. But, it also created many what-if scenarios in the minds of wrestling fans. Due to the territorial structure of the time period many dream match-ups never happened. (A prime Ric Flair vs. Prime Hulk Hogan match, for example.) In the context of a game, these match-ups, plus many more are possible.

And finally, 1991 was a year of great transition. Hulk Hogan dropped the Title to Ultimate Warrior. Opening the door for other stars to grab the limelight, like Randy Savage, the fore mentioned Warrior and Curt Hennig. Ric Flair, the long-time NWA Title Holder left his southern home and headed north to Stamford. Flair was bold enough to even throw the NWA title in the trash on National TV. This opened the door for wrestlers like Sting, Lex Luger, and Ricky Steamboat. All-in-all, 1991 was a wonderful year for emerging superstars and fairly open competition. And it is now the back drop for our game.

Not to worry though, if 1991 isn't your favorite time period. If demand warrants, Downey Games will create many more seasons, as well as All-Time Great sets for your wrestling enjoyment.

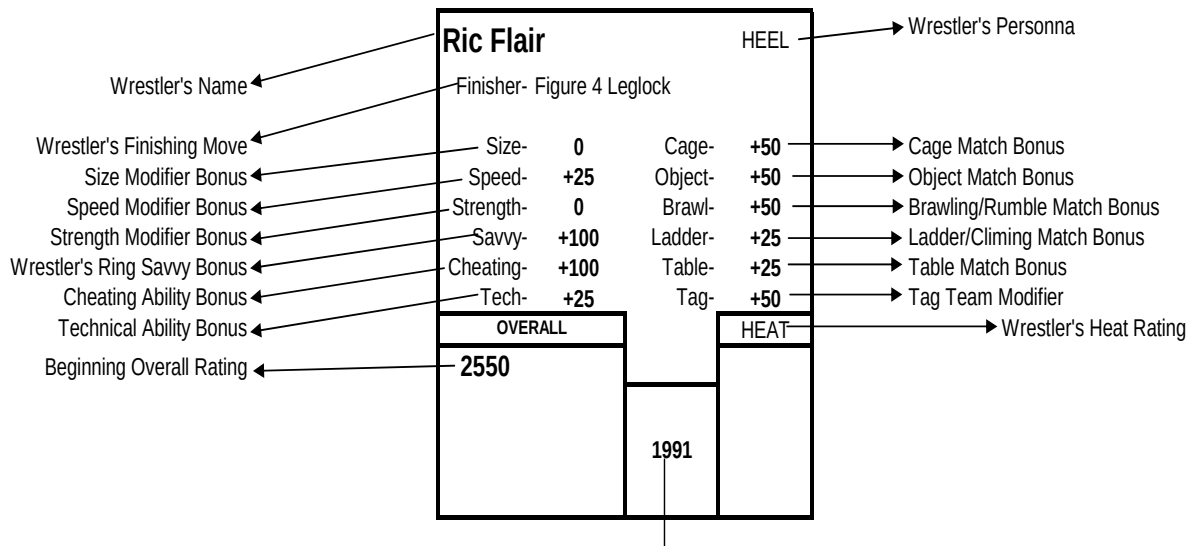

-Jeff Downey

RULES

The rules of Ultra Quick Wrestling are simple, and easy to follow. Most matches require only 2 or 3 rolls of the dice even with wild events.

Firstly, pick any two wrestlers for a match. For illustrative purposes, we'll choose Ric Flair vs. Tommy "Wildfire" Rich.

Before we start, let us examine the wrestler's card.

Next we need to determine the type of Match in which Flair and Rich will compete.

Note About Match Types

The only limit to the type of matches you can conduct in Ultra Quick Pro Wrestling is your imagination. The system is adaptable to anything and everything you could possibly dream up. In order to accommodate that flexibility, the match types are broken down into the following categories.

TV Taping- TV matches feature fewer clean pins in the purpose of advancing a story line. Most TV matches will end with some sort of trickery or strange happening. Many wild events will happen at TV Tapings. Due to the Nature of TV Tapings very rarely will you see a Title Match. Most champions fight at TV tapings with the "Non-Title Match" provision.

PPV Match- This is where feuds are either advanced or ended. The PPV match will feature more “clean” finishes. But, there are still occasional wild events and trickery in hopes of a feud continuing to a bigger PPV match. Most Titles are defended at PPV Matches.

No DQ Match- Just as the name implies, this match has no disqualifications. These matches are often used to end bitter feuds. Sometimes, however, outside interference will still contribute to the match’s outcome.

Cage Match- This is a match that aims to keep outside interference to a minimum. Often times, a cage match will end a bitter feud. But, as always in the wild and wacky world of pro wrestling, sometimes anything can happen!

Specialty Match- This category covers other match types. Whether it is a ladder match, table match, bull rope match, or lumber jack match. Again, your imagination is the only limit to the possibilities. Nothing ends a bitter feud like a good old dog collar match, or a lumber jack match.

For our Flair vs. Rich match, we’ll choose a TV Taping match to see if there is any heat between these two wrestlers.

Next we take each wrestler’s Overall Rating and write it on the score sheet. For Flair, this is 2550; For Rich it is 1500. A first glance tells us that Flair is a strong favorite to win the match. But remember, anything can happen and usually does in Pro Wrestling!

We then roll a single ten-sided die and consult the Match Modifier chart.

The Match Modifier Chart brings into effect many of the wrestler’s special abilities. The Match Modifier also insures that no two matches are exactly the same.

Our die roll is a 4 and cross referencing that with the Match Modifier Chart tells us each wrestler’s Ring Savvy rating will have an effect on the match at hand. We consult each wrestler card to see if we add or subtract a “savvy” bonus to the wrestler’s overall rating. A look at Flair’s card shows a savvy bonus of +100. Rich’s card produces a +10 result for the savvy rating. While Rich is a longtime ring veteran, 1991 wasn’t an overly good year for Wildfire.

NOTE

The procedure above applies to any of the modifiers listed on the chart. If the chart reads “Normal”, then no rating will be added or subtracted. You simply use each wrestler’s Overall Rating. If the wrestler’s card has two ratings listed between a slash “/”, the first rating is if the wrestler is a FACE; the second rating applies if the wrestler is fighting as a HEEL. (A Note on FACE and HEEL is listed below)

Also Note that in some Matches, a wrestler will have an automatic rating adjustment in addition to the Match Modifier Chart. Cage Matches, Brawls (Battle Royals etc.), Object Matches (Brass Knuckles, Russian Chain, etc.), Ladder (Ladder, scaffold match, climbing type matches), and Table matches all have rating categories on each wrestler's card. You'll add or subtract that rating in addition to using the Match Modifier Chart for those particular types of matches.

In our Flair vs. Rich match, we now have the following adjusted ratings for each wrestler:
Flair 2650 (2550 beginning overall rating + 100 point Savvy bonus)
Rich 1510 (1500 beginning overall rating + 10 point Savvy bonus)

Next we again roll a single 10-sided die and consult the "Pre-Match" chart. This chart will show us which wrestler may or may not be affected by an outside event.

NOTE

The Pre-Match chart is broken down evenly between FACE (Good Guy) designations and HEEL (Bad Guy). The terms are also mentioned on the result charts, and Unusual result charts. Each wrestler has a designation on his card as to his in-ring persona. Every match must have a HEEL and a FACE. Even if two HEELS or two FACES are squaring off, one must be designated as a HEEL and one as a FACE. Think of it in terms of one wrestler is hated less if two HEELS face off, or one wrestler is loved by the fan's more if two FACES match up. In most cases, you'll want to match up a genuine FACE against a HEEL anyway. But, at times, such as tournaments, a FACE/HEEL will battle another FACE/HEEL. Use your own judgment in cases of like persona wrestlers.

Our die roll was a "6". Consulting the Pre-Match Chart, it shows we'll need to consult the Face Pre-Match Event Chart. We then roll two 10-sided dice and cross reference the result with the Face Pre-Match Event Chart. Our dice roll shows a "53". Consulting the chart we read, "Heel Suffers Injury From Body Slam; -300 To Heel This Match".

So, during the beginning of the match, Rich has slammed Flair, and Flair has suffered an injury. This could dramatically affect our match. We make the adjustment of -300 to Flair's overall rating and find that it is now 2350 (2550 beginning overall rating + 100 point Savvy bonus - 300 point injury)

Now we subtract Rich's rating of 1510 from Flair's 2350 to arrive at a point differential of 840 points. We cross reference the point differential of 840 with the result chart and see that Flair scores a win on rolls of 1-75. Rich scores a win on rolls of 76-100. So, even though Flair has sustained an injury, he has still heavily favored over Rich. We again roll two 10-sided dice and get a "67". This tells us that if nothing strange happened, Ric Flair has defeated Tommy Rich.

We again roll two 10-sided dice and look at the Win Chart for the persona of the winner and the type of match conducted. So in the case of our match, we look at the HEEL TV

Taping chart. Rolling our dice, we get a result of 78. The Chart tells us to consult the Unusual Event Chart. Hold the Phone! Our preliminary result of Flair winning the match may be changed due to an unusual event.

We again roll two 10-sided dice and consult the Unusual Event Chart. Our dice roll reveals a result of “41”. Consulting the chart, we read, “Supermodel At Ringside Distracts Heel. Face Makes Pin” So, a Supermodel at ringside has distracted the Stylin’ and Profilin’ Flair, and Rich sneaks in a victory.

NOTE

Unusual Events are just that, unusual events. They don’t happen all that often. Any result on the Unusual Event Chart supercedes the preliminary result. If you are instructed to go to the Unusual Event Chart from the Pre-Match chart and no final result is given, conduct the match as normal. If the Result chart tells you to again refer to the Unusual Event Chart, ignore this reading and treat it as a pin fall. You will only consult the Unusual Event Chart once per match.

So our Flair vs. Rich match ends in a surprising victory for Rich. We can only assume that Flair is not pleased with losing no matter how it happened. We have the beginnings of a feud!

Again, the only limitation in Ultra Quick Wrestling is your own imagination. The results on the Pre-Match Charts and Unusual Event Chart are not written in stone. You can choose which results to use and which to ignore. (Especially the injuries from the Unusual Result Chart.) The charts are there to spark the imagination. It’s your game, use whatever results you choose.

May all of your matches be exciting!

Notes on Running a Federation

It’s a good idea not to use all 84 wrestlers in your Federation. A good number to start with is 32 or 40. This gives you a chance to fully develop story lines without throwing things together. This will also leave you with a group of “extra” wrestlers in which to use when the charts call for a “new wrestler”. These “extras” can also be used to replace wrestler’s that are injured or forced to leave town.

Heat Ratings- At the start of your Federation choose 10 HEELS and 10 FACES and assign them Heat Ratings from 1 to 10 with 10 being the highest initial rating. The Heat rating is what is used to determine the #1 Heel, #2 Face, etc on the charts. In other words, the Heel with the highest Heat Rating is the #1 Heel. Heat ratings can change from chart results or persona changes. If a wrestler changes personas he automatically goes to 1 Heat Point, no matter what he rating was before the turn.

Overall Ratings- Overall Ratings are adjustable as wrestlers win and lose matches. This is why I've provided plenty of blank space on each wrestler's Overall section on the card.

Each Time a Wrestler Captures the World Title give him a bonus of 100 points. This bonus is lost when the wrestler drops the Title. Minor Titles get a bonus of 50 points. Again, the 50 point bonus is lost when the wrestler loses the Title.

Each Time a wrestler scores a "Clean Pin" add 20 points to his Overall Rating.
Each Time a wrestler loses on a "Clean Pin" subtract 25 from his Overall Rating.
Each Time a wrestler's Heat Rating goes up a point add 20 to his Overall Rating.
Each Time a wrestler's Heat Rating goes down a point subtract 20 from his Overall Rating.

Tag team Matches- Tag Team Matches are conducted the same as a regular match with the following provisions. Combine the Overall ratings of both wrestlers and add or subtract the TAG rating of each wrestler to arrive at the team's initial Overall Rating. Any additions or subtractions form the charts will be made to the combined Overall Rating.

Battle Royals- In Battle Royals, pair up wrestlers in "mini battles" each win is considered an elimination. Continue this process until one wrestler remains. Be sure to add the "BRAWL" bonus to each wrestler.

Ultra Quick Wrestling

Advanced Charts

The Following is a set of optional charts created by Brien Martin. These charts require more die rolls to resolve a match, but also offer several options not included in the basic game. Use of these charts is completely optional.

-Jeff Downey

ULTRA QUICK WRESTLING SUPPLEMENTAL CHARTS

Ultra Quick Wrestling is (c) 2005 by Jeff Downey and Downey Games
Supplemental Charts are (c) 2005 by Brien Martin and Hot Stove Games
Special thanks to Rick Teverbaugh for ideas for some chart results

INTRODUCTION

These supplemental charts are designed to add more flavor and variation to the results that can be obtained using the basic charts found in Ultra Quick Wrestling. As a result, these charts require a few more dice rolls to resolve a match than needed for the basic game of Ultra Quick Wrestling. I've also modified certain rules to allow for these charts to be used by players.

NEW SEQUENCE OF PLAY

1. Choose wrestlers for the match
2. Roll on Match Skill Application Chart to determine which wrestler ratings to use for the match
3. Determine Heat Level for the match
4. Roll on the Pre-Match Event Possibility Chart to see if you need to refer to the Pre-Match Event Chart
5. If necessary, roll on the Pre-Match Event Chart to determine which event has taken place
6. If necessary, roll on the appropriate Event Chart. Apply the results immediately
7. Roll on the In-Match Event Possibility Chart to see if you need to refer to the In-Match Event Chart
8. If necessary, roll on the In-Match Event Chart to determine what event has taken place. Go to 11.
9. If no roll is necessary on the In-Match Event Chart, roll to determine the outcome of the match on the Result Chart
10. Use the second die of the dice roll on the Result Chart to determine the outcome on the Supplemental Match Results Chart. Go to 12.
11. If necessary, roll on the appropriate Event Chart. Apply the results immediately
12. Roll on the Post-Match Possibility Chart to see if you need to refer to the Post-Match Event Chart
13. If necessary, roll on the Post-Match Event Chart to determine which event has taken place
14. If necessary, roll on the appropriate Event Chart. Apply the results immediately

NEW RULES

1. HEAT RULES

Matches are now rated for their Heat Level, determined by the Heat Ratings of the wrestlers involved in the match. A match may be rated as High, Medium, or Low.

HEAT RATINGS

Wrestlers are awarded a Heat Rating based on the total number of Heat Points that they have earned. At the start of a federation, players should award Heat Points to ten Heel wrestlers and ten Face wrestlers. Points are awarded on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis. Heat Ratings are awarded as follows:

Heat Rating 10: to the wrestler with the most Heat Points
Heat Rating 9: to the wrestler with the second-most Heat Points
Heat Rating 8: to the wrestler with the third-most Heat Points
... and so on, down to ...
Heat Rating 2: to the wrestler with the ninth-most Heat Points.

For all wrestlers ranked tenth or lower in total Heat Points, award a Heat Rating of 1. In the event of a tie for placement from first through ninth, use the following tie-breakers:

1. Face wrestler ranked higher than Heel wrestler
2. Best overall value of wrestler

When a match is scheduled, add the Heat Ratings of the wrestlers involved and compare the total to the chart below. For tag team matches, use the Heat Rating of the wrestler on the team with the best Heat Rating.

- If the Heat Ratings of the wrestlers are 15 or higher, the Heat Level for the match is High.
- If the Heat Ratings of the wrestlers is 8 through 14, inclusive, the Heat Level for the match is Medium.
- If the Heat Ratings of the wrestlers is 7 or less, then Heat Level for the match is Low.

2. FACE HEAT/HEEL HEAT

Whenever the charts call for one or more Face Heat or Heel Heat, roll one die for each wrestler needed to determine which of the wrestlers is chosen. A roll of "0" refers to Heat 10, a roll of "1" refers to the wrestler rated Heat 1 who has the most Heat Points of all Heat 1 wrestlers. If more than one wrestler is needed, and the roll chooses a wrestler who has already been chosen, use the next highest-rated wrestler to join in.

EXAMPLE: A result calls for Heel Heat to jump into the ring. Roll one die. Let's say that the roll is "7". That means that the Heel wrestler with the Heat 7 rating will jump into the ring. If the roll had been "1", then you would choose the Heel wrestler with a Heat 1 rating who has earned the most Heat Points. Let's say that the top three Heat 1 wrestlers are:

Joe Smith 2 Heat Points
Tim Jones 0 Heat Points
Sam Adams -3 Heat Points

You'd choose Joe Smith, as he has the most Heat Points of all the Heel wrestlers with a Heat 1 rating.

If there is a tie for most Heat Points, choose a wrestler in any way you see fit from among those tied.

3. EVENT CHARTS

There are now three possibilities for events to occur in Ultra Quick Wrestling. They may occur before the match starts, once the match has begun, and after the match is over. In some cases, given the right dice rolls, there may be an event that occurs at all three times. In other cases, no events will happen at all.

PRE-MATCH EVENT

Before the match starts, but after the wrestlers have been chosen, and a skill has been rolled for on the Match Skill Application Chart, roll once on the Pre-Match Event Possibility Chart and reference the column that matches the Heat Level for this particular match as outlined in rule 2 above. If the roll falls within the range marked "Pre-Match Event", then an event has happened before the match starts.

Roll again on the Pre-Match Event Chart and use the chart that matches the range in which this new dice roll falls. One final roll is then made on the appropriate chart to determine what has happened prior to the start of the match.

EXAMPLE: Let's say we have a Medium Heat Level match going. The roll is 34. That roll falls within the range of "01-80" as found in the "Medium" column of the Pre-Match Possibility Chart. We now move to the Pre-Match Event Chart, where the roll is 63. That roll falls within the range marked "During wrestler entrance", which means we now move to the "Entrance" Chart. The roll there is 92, which falls within the range for the result: "The crowd is not lovin' the Face tonight ... -1 Heat to Face."

The Face receives an immediate, 1-point reduction in his total Heat Points. NOTE: Although the reduction is immediate, you would not change the wrestler's Heat Rating until after the match, assuming that the reduction or increase would change the wrestler's position in the rankings.

IN-MATCH EVENT

Just before the match starts, roll once on the In-Match Event Possibility Chart and reference the column that matches the Heat Level for this particular match as outlined in rule 2 above. If the roll falls within the range marked "In-Match Event", then an event has happened during the match.

Roll again on the In-Match Event Chart and use the chart that matches the range in which this new dice roll falls. One final roll is then made on the appropriate chart to determine what has happened during the match.

EXAMPLE: Let's say we have a Medium Heat Level match going. The roll is 18. That roll falls within the range of "01-25" as found in the "Medium" column of the In-Match Event Possibility Chart. We now move to the In-Match Event Chart, where the roll is 47. That roll falls within the range marked "Interruption or Interference", which means we now move to the "Interfere" Chart. The roll there is 12, which falls within the range for the result: "Heel ally or manager or tag partner tries to help but gets caught by referee. Heel wrestler or team is disqualified."

The Heel's manager or tag partner has caused the Heel to be disqualified!!! The match is over!!

In some cases, the result of the In-Match Event Possibility roll will be "No Event". In that case, resolve the match as you would normally, using the official Ultra Quick Wrestling rules.

POST-MATCH

After the match is over, whether ended by event or by resolving the match normally, roll once on the Post-Match Possibility Chart and reference the column that matches the Heat Level for this particular match as outlined in rule 2 above. If the roll falls within the range marked "Post-Match Event", then an event has happened after the match.

Roll again on the Post-Match Event Chart and use the chart that matches the range in which this new dice roll falls. One final roll is then made on the appropriate chart to determine what has happened after the end of the match.

EXAMPLE: Let's say we have a Medium Heat Level match going. The roll is 55. That roll falls within the range of "01-70" as found in the "Medium" column of the Post-Match Event Possibility Chart. We now move to the Post-Match Event Chart, where the roll is 78. That roll falls within the range marked "Intervention by the Commissioner", which means we now move to the "Commish" Chart. The roll there is 00, which falls within the range for the result: "The Commissioner declares the match a no contest, forces the wrestlers to wrestle again at the next PPV event."

The Face thought he had won on the disqualification. However, the Commissioner has voided the result and now the Face and Heel have to wrestle again at the next pay-per-view event!! This will surely cause bad blood between the Face and the Commissioner!!

4. MATCH SKILL APPLICATION CHART

This chart has been changed slightly from the Skill Chart as found in the basic Ultra Quick Wrestling game. It was my feeling that the higher-rated wrestler (based on his personal, overall base points) would be more likely to dictate the pace and style of the match. This holds true in pro wrestling as well, even if it is destined that the higher-rated wrestler is going to lose tonight. The writers still make it so that the better wrestler dictates the match, which makes the impending loss that much more surprising to the fans.

As a result, I have changed the probabilities associated with the various skill ratings that may be applied to a match. If the two wrestlers are equal in base, overall rating, then the chart is (with the exception of a change to a base-100 chart) the same as in the basic game. If the Face is the higher-rated wrestler, then he will have a slight leaning toward using his savvy and technical skill to win a match, and will never use cheating. If the Heel is the higher-rated wrestler, then he will have a slight leaning toward using his savvy and cheating skill to win a match, and will never use his technical skill.

That's not to say that Heels are not technically skilled. On the contrary, they are as skilled in the technical part of wrestling as Faces. However, given the choice between being technically superior, or resorting to bending the rules, a Face will play fair, but the Heel will cheat. Otherwise, why have Heels and Faces, right?

To use the chart, simply determine which wrestler is the higher-rated, and use the correct column on the chart for the situation. If both wrestlers are equally rated, use the "Even" column of the chart. Roll the dice and find the range into which the roll falls, and apply the result to the upcoming match.

EXAMPLE: The Face is rated 2100, the Heel is rated 1950. We'll use the "Face" column of the chart. The roll is 39, which falls within the "36-50" range in the "Face" column of the chart. We see that the result is "Size", so we will add the Size Rating of each wrestler to the overall ratings to arrive at the rating for this match. Remember, the Pre-Match Event Chart may award or deduct additional points, and that Specialty Match ratings may also add or deduct points, as well.

5. SUPPLEMENTAL MATCH RESULTS CHART

Rather than use the special charts for each type of match (TV, PPV, No DQ, Cage, and Specialty), I have devised a method to determine how the match turned out that simply uses the second die of the dice roll made on the Match Results Chart. The Match Results Chart determines who wins the match, and is not included in these charts. You must own Ultra Quick Wrestling to have the Match Results Chart.

To use the Supplemental Match Results Chart, simply find which range the second die falls into, cross-referenced with the type of match being wrestled, and find the result on the chart.

EXAMPLE: The match is a Pay-Per-View Match. The final Match Result roll is 61. Regardless of who won, use the "1" from the "61", and consult the "PPV" column of the Supplemental Match Results Chart. We find that "1" falls within the range of "0-1" on the "PPV" column. The result reads, "Questionable finish to the match." We now know that the winner has won under rather suspicious circumstances. You, as the player, can fill in the details as they best fit your federation.

MODIFIED HEAT RULES
1.	Players earn Heat Points from 1 through 10 at the start of a federation as determined by the player.
2.	After the first match, players are ranked Heat 1 to Heat 10 based on the number of Heat Points each wrestler has. Heat 10 has the most Heat Points, Heat 1 the least.
3.	A wrestler must have at least one Heat Point to qualify.
4.	Heat levels are determined for each match by adding the Heat numbers (1-10) for both wrestlers. For tag teams, add the average of the teammates.
5.	Any wrestler with 1 or more Heat Points is rated Heat 1, even if their total Heat Points do not place them in the top ten for the purpose of #2 above.
HEAT LEVELS
HIGH	Total, combined Heat Numbers of 15 through 20.
MEDIUM	Total, combined Heat Numbers of 8 through 14.
LOW	Total, combined Heat Numbers of 2 through 7.

Special thanks to Rick Teverbaugh for some ideas for results on the various charts and tables.
